Politics and Opera: “Popratics”  Center Street D
Reimagining Offenbach’s La Périchole in the 21st Century
Christopher Goeke, presenter

Politics and Opera: “Poperatics” — Reimagining Offenbach’s La Périchole in the 21st Century. Can an 1868 opera tell the story of 2018 American politics and culture? There is an uncanny similarity in Offenbach’s satire and the political milieu of the last two decades. This presentation will investigate how a modern production of La Périchole can honor Offenbach’s charming music and wry humor, maintaining rhyme-scheme and story line, while simultaneously engaging in relevant contemporary political and social discussion. Audio and visual examples included.

CANCELED: Reuse/Recycle/Repurpose: Creative Op Shop on a Shoestring Budget and Hacks for a one-person production team  Hope Ballroom A
Jen Stephenson and Anne Foradori, presenters

Small academic opera programs are often challenged by limited resources to produce theatrically credible, artistically satisfying performances of scenes, one-act, or full-length operas. This session serves as a resource guide for those working within a tight set of constraints, be they related to budget, personnel, areas of expertise, or community engagement and are wishing to generate a certain ambiance, suggest a period and location, define characters, and transform a recital hall into a theatrical space. Topics included in the session will be ideas and resources for basic costume design, including inexpensive hacks for fabric and material purchases; basic set design and construction, including easy and inexpensive set painting and resources for creating ambient staging effects with borrowed materials; and ideas for audience building and community engagement and education, including collaborative ideas for campus and community groups.
The Douglas Moore Songbook
Hope Ballroom E

Michael Ching and Gordon Ostrowski, presenters

Session will feature a live performance of excerpts from works by Ballad of Baby Doe composer Douglas Moore and his mid 20th century colleagues and students. Works will include selections from Wings Of The Dove (1961), Carry Nation (1966), and GALLANTRY (1958), and Beeson's Sweet Bye and Bye (1956). Works will be presented and introduced by Michael Ching and Gordon Ostrowski, who both have been involved with Moore's legacy through the Douglas Moore Fund for American Opera. Performers will include undergraduate, graduate, and faculty colleagues from the region. Session is coinciding with the release of THE DOUGLAS MOORE SONGBOOK by EC Schirmer Music Publishers.

More than Piano: Chamber Ensemble Options for Workshop Production

Kirk Severtson, presenter

Many opera programs don’t have access to a full opera orchestra for every production, so smaller-scale performances of standard works often default to accompaniment by piano only. However, more interesting results can often be achieved with the addition of just a few instruments to an otherwise piano-only production. This session will explore a range of ideas for productions to employ “piano-plus” instrumentation, from modest additions of one or two instruments, up to fully arranged versions for chamber ensembles, including numerous sources for finding and renting them. Be inspired to draw on the instrumental talent available at your institution to enhance your next workshop production!

Michael Chekhov & Opera: A Practical Approach to Acting for the Singer-Actor

James Haffner, presenter

Training opera singers to be singer-actors requires an acting technique that addresses the needs unique to the demands placed on the performance of opera theatre. The tenets of the Chekhov technique can be expressed fully in musical terms, which facilitate a more integrated and full-bodied performance approach. This presentation would be conducted in a workshop format that afford singers and—perhaps more importantly—teachers the opportunity to experience the work. In a short time, each participant will be given a set of tools that can be immediately transferred to work in the classroom and the rehearsal hall.

Incorporating Music by Women into Your Opera Scenes Program

Linda Lister, presenter

Most opera workshop scenes program consist entirely of works by male composers. Even those interested in changing the canon may not know where to start in adding music by women. So this session will provide recommendations and specific resources regarding operas by female composers to excerpt in scenes programs. The session will present repertoire from the Baroque era to the 21st century, including works by Francesca Caccini (La liberazione di Ruggiero dall’isola d’Alcina), Pauline Viardot (Cendrillon), Libby Larsen (Picnic, A Wrinkle in Time), Lori Laitman (The Scarlet Letter, The Three Feathers), as well as less familiar up-and-coming female composers.
Paul Hogle
President and CEO of the Cleveland Institute of Music

Paul Hogle was appointed as the ninth president and chief executive officer of the venerable Cleveland Institute of Music in July 2016, following a three-decade career of successful executive leadership for America’s most respected, innovative, and accomplished classical music institutions. With an enviable track record of pursuing mission-centered strategy, Hogle has developed a vast network of leaders in the performing arts community having worked, partnered, and consulted in America, Australia, and Japan.

Prior to joining CIM, Hogle served as Executive Vice President of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. During one of the most tumultuous times in its storied history, Hogle helped architect the DSO’s unprecedented, highly-publicized turnaround which has resulted in a previously unimaginable renaissance in Detroit.

With Hogle’s arrival in Cleveland, CIM began a journey of engagement, conversation, and planning prompted by the ambitious assignment of crafting a new strategic plan for a new century. The results have been remarkable, including the highest-rated incoming classes in a generation and a 235% increase in African American and Latinx students, recruiting top faculty and administrative talent, growing annual support by 70% while adding over $10 million of new commitments to the endowment, breaking ground on a state-of-the-art student housing complex, increasing the school’s marketing and presence in Cleveland, recruiting a nationally significant roster of guest conductors to lead the CIM orchestra, building and strengthening alliances with conservatories across China and Europe, and, in pursuit of paying CIM’s civic rent, inaugurating an annual day of service — all while opening the CIM campus to new and legacy arts and community partners, lowering tuition by 15%, increasing scholarship funds by $1 million annually, and strengthening fiscal equilibrium.

Before joining the Detroit executive team in 2010, Hogle served in senior staff posts for the Atlanta, Baltimore, Chicago, and Indianapolis symphony orchestras. He was a founder of The Stewardship Group, a consulting and executive recruitment firm that facilitated the building of resources for a national client base. His career began as Executive Director of the Evansville Philharmonic (Indiana), one of the great regional orchestras in America.

A native of Northeast Ohio, Hogle earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Music Management from the University of Evansville, a joint business and music degree program where he also studied trombone performance. He has served on the faculty of the Orchestra Leadership Academy of the League of American Orchestras and as a professor at Wayne State University in Detroit. He is a founding and current faculty member for the Masters in Arts Administration program at Chicago’s Roosevelt University.
The Turner-Fischer Center for Opera at LSU offers a comprehensive training program for aspiring opera students, who work with a dynamic and accomplished faculty. Productions at the Turner-Fischer Center are consistently recognized at high levels, including first place in prestigious National Opera Association competitions for three years in a row. Our many alumni, such as Lisette Oropesa and Paul Groves, recipients of the esteemed Richard Tucker Award, regularly go on to perform on the world’s greatest opera stages. FIERCE DELIVERS TALENT

Opera in Children’s Literature: Center Street D
A Comprehensive Bibliography
John DeLooper, presenter

This lecture will discuss the findings resulting from the creation of a comprehensive bibliography of English Language children’s opera books published from 1895 to present. Historically opera was often assumed to be an elitist art in the United States and was thus seldom discussed in library collection development literature, and equally rarely highlighted in children’s literature periodicals. Recently, two librarians, supported by a Carnegie Whitney grant from the American Library Association, investigated the impact of opera themed children’s books by compiling a bibliography which documented instances of opera in published English Language children’s literature over the last 125 years. By analyzing what was published, this presentation will provide new insights about the cultural appreciation of opera in the United States.

Collaborative Experience: Hope Ballroom A
Training Coaches and Singers Together
Amanda Johnston and Kevin Chance, presenters

Despite the importance of this vocation, there are few opportunities to train emerging coaches and collaborative pianists specializing in opera. While reputable programs such as Aspen Music Festival and Music Academy of the West have established collaborative piano streams, they do not offer dedicated instruction in vocal coaching. This session will offer a detailed outline of how to add a collaborative piano track to an existing summer program or workshop, outlining necessary resources, possible session topics, and various methods of mentorship. Further, training programs that cater to collaborative pianists interested in specializing in vocal repertoire will be compared and contrasted.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS
The Collegiate Opera Scenes Competition Committee would like to thank Paul Houghtaling, NOA President and past COSC Chair, and Robert Hansen, NOA Executive Director, for their kind assistance and support of this competition. Thanks also to Scott Skiba for helping us with our minimal set pieces and location site. Congratulations again to all of tonight’s finalists. See you all next year!
“I had one semester of opera direction at Indiana University. I realize how much I could have learned if there had been internships available in opera direction and production. That is why I support our organization’s involvement in education in this field.”

- JoElyn Wakefield-Wright

JoElyn Wakefield-Wright has been a member of NOA since the 1972 National Conference in San Francisco and has had a long and distinguished career as a performer and educator in opera. She studied at the University of Omaha, Pfeiffer College in North Carolina, and Indiana University where she received her Master of Music degree in Voice Performance with a minor in choral conducting. While at Indiana, Ms. Wakefield-Wright was heard in several roles with IU’s Opera Theater. Too Many Sopranos: Breaking Rules and Creative Solutions for Small Opera Programs

Dawn Wells Neely, Ryu-Kyung Kim, and David Siegler, presenters

Most traditional operas are written for professional singers with male dominant casts. However, the make-up of most small college or university opera workshops is predominately undergraduate female singers. What can a director do to give students experience in some type of quality production during their time in school with both contemporary and traditional operas and operettas? There are many strategies to explore beyond the standard scenes program. A little “rule-breaking” may be in order, but it does not have to be a taboo! This session will present ideas for good “rule-breaking” based on research and frank discussions with opera director colleagues experiencing their own struggles to bring opera to young students and examine pedagogically appropriate solutions to not only accommodate, but celebrate the female voice.

Cultural Sensitivities in Opera: Enlisting Support and Navigating Controversy

I.D.E.A. (Inclusion, Diversity, Equity, Access) Initiative

Justin John Moniz and Kumiko Shumizu, presenters

The buzz around Seattle Opera’s 2017 production of Giacomo Puccini’s Madama Butterfly initiated a culture-shifting conversation in which Seattle’s Asian-American community decried the racist stereotypes and cultural appropriation at the core of the opera. Rather than shying away from the controversy, how must we (the producers, directors, and performers of the art form), address the presentation of such works, if they are to be presented at all? In an effort to preserve the integrity of the operatic canon, one must carefully navigate any controversy associated with the material. In this session, we’ll discuss the dos and don’ts, the shoulds and shouldn’ts, and address a user-friendly systematic plan that can be tailored to any artistic process.
Massage helps us perform tasks with greater longevity and comfort. Muscles can become short and tight with use. Adhesions develop in soft tissue throughout our bodies, including in the throat, neck, shoulders, arms and hips. Massage can improve and alleviate tight muscles, adhesions, increasing blood flow, reducing recovery time. It helps expel waste material from the blood and interstitial fluid and tissue, improving efficiency of bodily functions. Pre-event massage can increase flexibility, lower blood pressure and reduce anxiety. My goal with this session is to draw musicians’ attention to the value of massage as ongoing maintenance for the musical athlete.

Commissioning a New Opera at Your University

Kristin Kenning, Evan Mack, Joshua McGuire, and Brian Viliunas, presenters

Universities are where new opera of the highest caliber should be created – in programs that can take the necessary risk that new art demands. We will detail Samford University’s four-year process of commissioning, creating, funding, producing, and touring the new American opera The Ghosts of Gatsby by Evan Mack and Joshua McGuire. When challenged with the question, “What is the biggest dream you have for your opera program,” an obvious answer is creating the space for new opera to be written, and to inspire the students in your program with roles that are tailored to them.

William Shakespeare – just mentioning his name can be intimidating. How then do we make his works and the language of his time palatable and interesting to elementary school students? This session will focus on the creation of a new hip hop opera based on Shakespeare’s A Midsummer Night’s Dream. This 35-minute opera for youth will be presented the 17th year of The University of Texas at San Antonio’s outreach program, Opera on the Run, in a collaborative effort with the San Antonio Symphony and the Opera Guild of San Antonio.

and the Unlikelihood of a Return of the “Novello Show”

J. R. Fralick, presenter

The shows of Ivor Novello were the mainstay of the British stage from the 1920s through the 1950s, yet most of them have now “disappeared without a trace.” The music of Ivor Novello is as varied and successful as his own career as film star, popular songwriter, director, stage actor and operetta composer. While Ivor Novello’s music could be successfully refashioned for contemporary opera theater, why is it we cannot go “Back to Before” to produce the “Novello Shows”?

Opera Improvisation: It’s just full of surprises
Hope Ballroom E

Ann Baltz, presenter

Opera improvisation is not traditionally part of an opera curriculum, however, if well-taught and presented it can be a powerful skill that dramatically affects a singer’s craft and mindset. In improvisation singers are liberated from the boundaries of "Right and Wrong" and must rely on their own creativity. This interactive session features collaborative exercises designed to increase listening sensitivity, harmonic awareness, vocal expression, and emotional connection to music and text. Attendees are invited to invent arias, ensembles and whole scenes, with and without accompaniment. Here, there are no wrong notes, no “correct” ways, no judgements. Just the thrill and joy of spontaneous creativity.

From Dreams to Reality: Challenges and Solutions for the Developing Collegiate Opera Program
Center Street D

Ellen Denham, Mitra Sadeghpour and Jon Truitt, presenters

Congratulations—you’re a collegiate opera director! Do you ever feel like you don’t know if you are a bird or a fish? You’re a music director one day, a stage director the next, and the day after that, you are crawling across the floor leading movement improvisation, or building a three-person, seven-foot tall whale puppet. Many programs and institutions deal with limited budgets, small groups of students, student demographics that include few male singers, and limited orchestral and facility options. How do we address these challenges and convince stakeholders that we can still present a program of value and quality for the students? This session will ask the question: What is the core experience needed for training? We will also explore solutions for the developing collegiate opera program, propose some groundwork for institutionalizing the solutions that work best, and involve participants in an open forum discussion, utilizing the experience and expertise of everyone in the room.

CANCELED: American Futures: Breaking the Stigma with Student Composers and Young Singers
Hope Ballroom A

Ann Moss, Griffin Candey, and Cheryl Cellon Lindquist, presenters

A session to discuss not only how to (a) teach young composers to write effective vocal/operatic music, but also how to (b) demonstrate how healthy collaborations between composers and performers can help populate the field of opera with more vocally-satisfying music. How can performers help a piece serve its creators, its interpreters, and its audiences? How can composers help collaborators explore new material while respecting their practicalities of their instrument(s)? The American Futures team aims to help break the stigma: to help young musicians see the responsibilities, the joys, and the benefits of leaping into new music collaborations together.

Plenary Session
Libby Larsen and the Dominick Argento Connection
Hope Ballroom E

David Tayloe, Host
Grace Hall Richardson, soprano, University of Alabama
Dylan Glenn, baritone, Cleveland Institute of Music

As a student of Dominick Argento, Libby Larsen’s work within the operatic landscape has become a driving force for young composers, singers and directors. This session will serve as an exploration of Libby and Dominick’s contributions to our artform through a question and answer format. This session will be aided by short performances, by student young artists and faculty members, of the works of both Libby Larsen and Dominick Argento.

Libby Larsen is one of America’s most prolific and most performed living composers. She has created a catalogue of over 500 works spanning virtually every genre from intimate vocal and chamber music to massive orchestral works and over twelve operas. Her music has been praised for its dynamic, deeply inspired, and vigorous contemporary American spirit. Constantly sought after for commissions and premieres by major artists, ensembles and orchestras around the world, Libby Larsen has established a permanent place for her works in the concert repertory. Larsen has been hailed as “the only English-speaking composer since Benjamin Britten who matches great verse with fine music so intelligently and expressively” (USA Today); as “a composer who has made the art of symphonic writing very much her own.” (Gramophone); as “a mistress of orchestration” (Times Union); and for “assembling one of the most impressive bodies of music of our time” (Hartford Courant). Her music has been praised for its “clear textures, easily absorbed rhythms and appealing melodic contours that make singing seem the most natural expression imaginable.” (Philadelphia Inquirer) “Libby Larsen has come up with a way to make contemporary opera both musically current and accessible to the average audience.” (The Wall Street Journal). “Her ability to write memorable new music completely within the confines of traditional harmonic language is most impressive.” (Fanfare) Libby Larsen has received numerous awards and accolades, including a 1993 Grammy as producer of the CD: The Art of Arlene Augér, an acclaimed recording that features Larsen’s Sonnets from the Portuguese. Her opera Frankenstein, The Modern Prometheus was selected as one of the eight best classical music events of 1990 by USA Today. The first woman to serve as a resident composer with a major orchestra, she has held residencies with the California Institute of the Arts, the Arnold Schoenberg Institute, the Philadelphia School of the Arts, the Cincinnati Conservatory, the Minnesota Orchestra, the Charlotte Symphony, and the Colorado Symphony. Larsen’s many commissions and recordings are a testament to her fruitful collaborations with a long list of world-renowned artists, including The King’s Singers, Benita Valente, and Frederica von Stade, among others. Her works are widely recorded on such labels as Angel/EMI, Nonesuch, Decca, and Koch International. As a past holder of the 2003-2004 Harissios Papamarkou Chair in Education at the Library of Congress and a recipient of the Eugene McDermott Award in the Arts from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a Lifetime Achievement Award from the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and a Peabody award, Libby Larsen is a vigorous, articulate champion of the music and musicians of our time. In 1973, she co-founded (with Stephen Paulus) the Minnesota Composers Forum, now the American Composers Forum, which has been an invaluable advocate for composers in a difficult, transitional time for American arts. Consistently sought-after as a leader in the generation of millennium thinkers, Libby Larsen’s music and ideas have refreshed the concert music tradition and the composer’s role in it.

YOUNG ARTISTS ON THE ITALIAN STAGE
Exploring facets of the Opera Viva! summer session that set it apart from the rest
By Maddalena Primavera

VERONA, ITALY: The opera-loving world faithfully travels to Verona each summer. Just imagine a perfect balmy night: a breeze sweeps through the Piazza Bra as throngs gather around the entrance to the 2000 year old arena. Once seated on the ancient stone steps, the bell tower chimes 9 o’clock. The conductor appears, and a hush falls over the crowd. As the violins sound the opening strains of Verdi’s Aida, you close your eyes and let yourself be transported to ancient Egypt.

Not far away, the students of Opera Viva! have had three weeks of intensive opera study, through classroom and private instruction in diction, recitative, staging, period movement, coaching and voice. They present three public performances during their time in Verona, sharing their talents with eager audiences who delight in the rapture of Verdi’s Traviata as well as the charming gaggle of sopranos surrounding Donizetti’s Nemorino, drunk on an elixir of love.

“When we designed Opera Viva! with a focus on Italian opera repertoire,” says founder and Artistic Director Dr. Madelyn Spring Gearheart, “we committed to details that would optimize the students’ summer experience. A good location was essential, and Verona is the epicenter of the Italian opera world each summer because of the Arena festival where students attend weekly performances. This vibrant city blends ancient and modern with countless opportunities for free time. Verona is also just a short train ride away from Venice, Padova, Vicenza and Lake Garda.”

Accommodations are always an important consideration. Opera Viva! has secured modern, air-conditioned apartments overlooking the Adige River. All instruction takes place in the apartment complex. Students can just roll out of bed in the morning and come downstairs to Italian class!

“Most importantly,” continues Eastman School’s voice instructor Katherine Ciesinski, “Opera Viva! focuses on the process of opera. Our pedagogical approach gives each student the tools to advance their vocal development.” The students have ample opportunity to perform in public, but rather than investing energies into a full-length opera production, the world-renowned faculty concentrates on improving the skill level of each individual student. The thesis of Opera Viva! is that the student will sing better on the day they leave the program than on the day they arrived. “I was accepted to attend five different summer programs,” says soprano Alyssa Orlando from Houston Baptist University, “and I chose Opera Viva! because of their personal commitment to develop me as an individual artist and not just all about a big opera performance.”

After the ovation at the final student performance, there is lots of shared laughter, feasting on pizza, prosciutto melone and everyone’s beloved gelato. When it’s time to scatter to the corners of the globe, the students know that the friendships created, the connections to a network of world-class instructors cultivated, and the vast amount of knowledge imparted at Opera Viva! will remain with them forever.

Fifty-Third Street: Addressing the Marginalization of the Homeless through Opera
Sacred in Opera Initiative:

Isai Muñoz, Tammie Huntington, and Jody Nagel, presenters

Fifty-Third Street examines the lives of two homeless men in New York City, and the reactions toward them from various facets of society, including the church. Nagel, a self-professed Atheist who utilizes Biblical references throughout the score, welcomed Tammie Huntington, an evangelical Christian, to produce and direct the opera’s premiere in 2007. Together, they walk us through the opera’s score, and share on the history of their collaborative relationship, that through this opera, models interdisciplinary partnerships with social justice programs, providing the cast, as well as audiences, a chance to respond to the rising rate of poverty in America.

(A Performance Panel featuring the History of Operas by African American Women Composers)

Alexis Davis-Hazell, Minnita Daniel-Cox, Marcia Porter and Rosalyn Wright-Floyd, presenters

My Sister’s Keeper: Operas by African American Women offers a brief overview of the history and scope of opera composition by women including Shirley Graham Du Bois, Zenobia Powell Perry, and Julia Perry. The session incorporates live performance, media, and short narrative to illuminate the effect of race, gender, and class on their lives, works and compositional styles. These trailblazers contributed to contemporary opera in the face of financial and cultural barriers, and synthesized Western art music techniques with those of the African-American tradition. Despite some having gained national and international recognition during their lifetimes, these women’s achievements are forgotten today.

A Focused Strategy for Selecting and Auditioning for Graduate Schools

Christopher Michel and Rebecca L. Renfro, presenters

Choosing a graduate school is one of the first pivotal decisions that defines a singer’s career path as a working vocal artist. The value system that guides these choices ultimately defines a singer’s success. This session will offer strategies to help guide the decision making process for selecting the right graduate school along with a focused approach for navigating the application and audition path. Variables that are integral to the process such as assembling a trusted team of mentors, tactics for selecting the right program, repertoire choices, and the audition preparation timeline will be discussed in this presentation.

Career Path and Professional Documents Workshop

James Harrington, Lisa Sylvester, David Ronis, Peggy Kriha-Dye, and David Okerlund, presenters

Your resume is often the first interaction a potential employer has with you, and the internet is full of tutorials on landing jobs in traditional career paths. But singers don’t have traditional career paths or traditional skill sets – so how do we present ourselves well in the comparatively unknown worlds of performance, academia, and arts administration? This session will look at standard resumes/CVs in these sectors and give participants valuable tips for formatting as well as framing non-traditional skill sets.
Introduction and Application of Projection Design for Opera

Joshua May, Ariana Wyatt, Richard Masters, and Scott Skiba, presenters

Projections have been used in opera for over forty years, but their use on college campuses and by smaller companies has been limited by the lack of available resources both in equipment and knowledge. This session seeks to expand the affordability, boundaries, and availability of projections for the stage. The goal of this session is toward innovation in performance and instruction to provide information and application for collegiate opera workshop and small company stage directors. The innovation lies in taking a technological medium usually restricted to higher budgets and making it accessible to all. As part of this session, we will demonstrate our experiences working with various designs with video examples from scenes programs and select a live student performance with a design walkthrough by the presenters from the basic level of use to the more advanced in developing new works.

DAVID BAMBERGER – director, educator, librettist, author, administrator – has staged over 250 productions with stars including Roberta Peters, Sherrill Milnes, and Jerome Hines. After co-founding Cleveland Opera, he was its General Director for over 28 years, growing it into one of America’s major regional companies. For its 25th Anniversary he secured José Carreras, Placido Domingo, and Luciano Pavarotti to perform in concert at Cleveland Browns Stadium. The opera he created for the 75th Anniversary of Anne Frank’s birth was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize.

From 2004 to 2018, he was Artistic Director of the Opera Program for the Cleveland Institute of Music. His students have appeared in major roles with companies around the world. Mr. Bamberger’s staging has been enjoyed throughout America, from the New York City Opera to the Los Angeles Music Center. He sits as a member of the Professional Development Forum of Opera America.

Prior to beginning his career in higher education, Hansen performed widely in opera, musical theatre, and concert, making his professional debut with the Boston Summer Opera. He has continued an active performing career during his nearly 40 years of university teaching, including as tenor soloist in Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony with the Amarillo Symphony, and as a soloist in the Mozart Requiem with the Randel Chamber Orchestra. He is an artist member of Chamber Music Amarillo, having performed numerous concerts for that series. His numerous performances on the lyric stage include such diverse roles as Major General Stanley in The Pirates of Penzance, Alfred in Die Fledermaus, Don Ottavio in Don Giovanni, and Almaviva in The Barber of Seville, Archibald Craven in The Secret Garden, and Georges in La Cage aux Folles.

He has performed internationally in recital in Paris and in Brisbane, Australia. He has directed over eighty professional and collegiate productions, and was the founding general director of the Red River Lyric Theater, now known as Red River Lyric Opera.

After presenting a production of Milhaud’s Le pauvre matelot at the NOA Convention in Dallas in 1984, he joined NOA in 1985, and has attended every conference since then. He quickly became actively involved in the organization. He joined the Board of Directors in 1987, and served as associate editor and then editor of the Opera Journal before being elected Vice President. He has the distinction of being both the youngest and longest-serving President of NOA. Following a one-year term as treasurer, he became Executive Director in 1999.
